

2017 ANNUAL REPORT

REFLECTING ON THE STEPS WE'VE TAKEN

As my term as Board President comes to a close, I am reflecting on the steps we've taken on the road to advancing equality and justice in this beautiful province in which we live. There are so many pressing needs.

A particularly urgent need is access to justice. When I began my term as President, a decade and a half of chronic underfunding and devaluing of legal aid for family law had left a gaping hole for women seeking legal help. But today, just two years later—and after many years of hard work and tenacity at West Coast LEAF —women in our province have Rise Women's Legal Centre, BC's only community legal clinic providing a wide range of services specifically for low-income women in the Lower Mainland. Launched in partnership with UBC's Allard School of Law, the wait lists are months long, which speaks to both the pressing need and the success of the services delivered.

We are addressing access to justice from all angles and with all available tools. In April 2017, we worked with our colleagues at BC Public Interest Advocacy Centre to launch our first constitutional challenge on behalf of Single Mothers Alliance and two individual women who are fleeing violence. We believe that it's past time for the provincial government to step up and fulfil its duty to the women in this province whose safety is being jeopardized and whose relationships with their children hang in the balance.

We have also been reflecting on the best ways to make change and to bring our vision of substantive equality into the future. What does equality and justice at home mean in the current context of global unrest and uncertainty? This year, West Coast LEAF renewed our calls for Canada to step up to meet its international obligations to address the current state of gender equality. We even traveled to Geneva to speak up at the United Nations for BC women's rights and to share our perspective on the ongoing crisis in child care and its wide-ranging implications for women's human rights.

We are also actively working to resist the sexist myths and stereotypes around sexual assault. Last year, we intervened in the Canadian Judicial Council Inquiry that recommended a judge be removed from the bench for his egregious comments about a sexual assault complainant. This year, we've embarked on an ambitious three-year project to pursue justice system reform so that the rights of sexual assault survivors are protected, while respecting the constitutional and human rights of accused persons.

These are the highlights for last fiscal year, and the foundations that were laid have resulted in a strategic vision for the next few years. We are focused most intently on our work on access to justice, economic security, the right to parent, addressing violence against women, health and reproductive rights, and criminalization and incarceration of women.

I'd like to offer gratitude to our donors, funders, and the people that serve this organization as staff, on the board, and in countless volunteer positions, including those who serve as pro-bono counsel in our interventions and cases. Thank you for your sustaining commitment to advancing equality and towards building a more just and equal BC.

LITIGATION

We bring forward systemic challenges and intervene in cases that have an impact women's inequality. We worked on 9 cases, including:

- Intervening in BCCLA and JHSC v Canada at the BC Supreme Court to make sure that the disproportionate effects of solitary confinement on women, particularly Indigenous women and women with mental health issues, are brought to attention.
- Intervening in Schrenk v BC Human Rights Tribunal at the Supreme Court of Canada to stand against the negative impacts of discrimination and harassment that go well beyond economic burdens to encompass psychological harms and the perpetuation of systemic inequality.
- Alongside BCPIAC, launching Single Mothers Alliance v BC, a constitutional challenge against the Province of BC and the Legal Services Society for their failure to provide adequate family law legal aid to women fleeing abusive relationships. The case will be heard in BC Supreme Court.
- Resisting unlawful and harmful myths and stereotypes about sexual assault complainants in urging the Canadian Judicial Council Inquiry to remove former judge Robin Camp from the bench.
- Standing up for workers' rights in Denton v BC at the BC Court of Appeal to protect and promote meaningful and equal access to justice by allowing courts to retain discretion to hear Charter claims against an administrative regime.

AREAS OF FOCUS

In 2016/17, we continued to work for women's equality on many fronts:

- ECONOMIC SECURITY: Fighting for women's economic security by actively supporting anti-poverty policy solutions, including an affordable, accessible, and high quality child care system.
- ACCESS TO JUSTICE: Fighting for women's access to justice by developing case law in support of increased access to family law legal aid and continuing to ensure that our equality and human rights laws, as well as our family laws, provide accessible and effective protections.
- THE RIGHT TO PARENT: Fighting for equality in the child protection system by advocating for a fair and expedient process and by pushing for preventative services that will support women to parent.
- VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN: Fighting for women's safety by challenging the systemic barriers that put women at an increased risk of violence and ensuring that every level of our criminal justice system is responsive to violence against all women, including the most marginalized.
- CRIMINALIZATION & INCARCERATION: Fighting for the human rights of criminalized women by bringing the voices of women to key public policy debates on the criminal justice system.
- HEALTH AND REPRODUCTIVE RIGHTS: Promoting women's self-determination through safe, appropriate, accessible, and judgment-free health-care services tailored to meet the needs of diverse women and that recognize women's autonomy.

“Is That Legal? is flying off the shelves here. We’ve had 3,444 copies ordered so far this year, which is more than any of our other public legal education (PLE) materials. And many of the people ordering this booklet are placing multiple orders of 25 copies. So it would appear there’s a lot of interest out there about PLE information around online harassment and cyberbullying. Our plans to translate the booklet into five languages other than English will help meet the needs of diverse communities.”
